“The Social Media Effect: The Legal Do’s and Don’ts for Associations”

Social Media is here to stay and everyday it is changing . . . from traditional platforms like Facebook and Twitter, to some of the newer platforms like Snapchat and Whatsapp.

As the Board, you may be faced with deciding which platform to use, how you will manage the site, and how to manage other issues such as what to do about the neighbor that hates the HOA and has created an alternate Facebook page using the same name as the Association. In grappling with all of these issues, there are various legal matters you should think about and consider.

This Seminar will talk about some of the various social media platforms and how these platforms can legally impact associations. Legal considerations to address include copyright and trademark laws, the rogue homeowner who has created his own website against the Association’s wishes and the legal ways to deal with this issue as well as some best practices.

The Speakers

Nicole A. Williams, Esq.

Nicole Williams is an attorney with the law office of Rees Broome, PC, where she represents condominium and homeowners associations located in Maryland, Virginia and the District of Columbia. She has previously served as a panel chair on the Montgomery County Commission on Common Ownership Communities and currently is serving on the Prince George’s County Commission on Common Ownership Communities.

Tiffany N. Williams, Esq.

Tiffany Williams is an attorney with the law office of Rees Broome. Her practice concentrates on community association law. Prior to joining Rees Broome, Tiffany served as a judicial law clerk in Prince George’s County, Maryland. She additionally has extensive experience in reviewing and making recommendations on thousands of affidavit judgments during her clerkship, many of which dealt with condominiums and homeowners association issues.
